1.0 INTRODUCTION

1.1 The purpose of this brochure

This brochure is about discrimination. Our goal with this brochure is to provide a brief presentation of legal issues relevant in the context of discrimination. The purpose is to enable the reader to see the main issues that may occur, and to make the reader aware of her rights. According to Norwegian legislation, all who live in Norway shall have equal opportunities and rights in the society.

This brochure is a step towards fighting and ultimately banishing discrimination. We wish to do this by providing information on protection against discrimination.

We believe that the more you know about the protection provided to you by law, the more you will use the rules and invoke your rights.

2.0 CONTENT OF THE BROCHURE

Have you ever experienced, receiving a refusal phone call because you are a foreigner after attending a showing for a house or a flat. Or have you ever not been able to get permanent employment because your Norwegian isn't good enough?

Have you experienced others calling you unpleasant names, or that your husband believes that your son should be allowed to do more or different activities than your daughter?

Have you ever wondered if this is discrimination or harassment? Have you wondered where to go, who to call or how to get help? If yes, you should read this brochure.

Section 3

Section 3 explains what discrimination is.

Section 4

In section 4 we explain harassment and racism.

Section 5

In section 5 we describe a number of situations where discrimination arises and situations in which we know from experience that women often find themselves.

Section 6

In section 6 we inform you of where you can get help if you have experienced discrimination.

Section 7

Finally we inform you of which laws protect you against discrimination in section 7.

3.0 DISCRIMINATION

3.1 What is discrimination?

Discrimination is the same as treating people differently for no valid reason.

In simple terms this means treating a person less favorably or pleasantly on the basis of gender, pregnancy, parental leave, religion, life stance, skin color, national origins, ethnic background, disability, gender identity, sexual orientation, age or combinations of the terms mentioned above.

Discrimination entails that you are not given the same rights and opportunities as others.

One example of discrimination is a woman losing her job because she is pregnant.

Practice and research show that women often have a lower position in society than men and are therefore more often discriminated against.

Immigrant women are more often faced with discrimination than Norwegian women. They are discriminated against both for being women and foreigners. Many experience great difficulty especially in getting employment.

The UN Commission on the Status of Women has requested that Norway improves its dissemination of information on the protection of women against discrimination. The UN believes that knowledge is a premise for creating a more just and equal society.

3.2 Discrimination is illegal

Discrimination is against the law

It is illegal to discriminate according to Norwegian law.

Human rights

It is also illegal to discriminate according to human rights legislation. For example the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women offers you protection against discrimination on the basis of gender, and the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination makes it illegal to discriminate on the basis of your ethnic origin.

Compensation

You can claim compensation if you are exposed to discrimination. Compensation means payment in money. The Court is the only body that can award compensation.

Punishment

If someone exposes you to racism or other gross discrimination, they can be punished pursuant to Norwegian law. The incident must then be reported to the police.

3.3 What is discrimination in terms of the law?

Being discriminated against can be a degrading experience. But being treated unfairly and differently might feel unjust without qualifying as discrimination in terms of the law.

So what is discrimination in terms of the law?

Discrimination has three key characteristics:

Three key characteristics to constitute discrimination

1. Differential treatment. This means that someone is being treated less favourably than others in a similar situation.

2. The differential treatment of a person is based on one or more grounds of discrimination.
3. No legal exceptions apply.

All three characteristics must be present to constitute discrimination.

3.3.1 Differential treatment

1st
characteristic

Unjustified means without good reason

Differential treatment is the first key characteristic to discrimination. Differential treatment means that you are treated differently compared to another person in the same situation as you.

What does it mean to be treated less favourably than others in a similar situation?

Example

A woman and a man apply for the same job. Both have the same education and experience (qualifications). They are in a similar situation. One gets the job. The one that doesn't get the job has been treated less favourably than the successful applicant.

Comparison

In order to find out if you have been treated less favorably, you must compare your situation to others' in the same situation.

The effect of the treatment

It is not necessary that the person who treated you differently wanted you to find yourself in a less favorable position. It is sufficient that you are in a less favorable position. It is the effect of the treatment that counts.

Even though you feel that you have been treated less favourably than others, one has to draw a line towards trivial circumstances.

3.3.2 Grounds of discrimination

2nd Characteristic

The second key characteristic is that the differential treatment is based on one or more grounds of discrimination.

The law states that there are certain categories against which discrimination are illegal. These are called grounds of discrimination.

Grounds of discrimination.

The grounds of discrimination pursuant to Norwegian legislation are:

- gender (female and male)
- pregnancy, paternity leave because of birth or adoption
- caring responsibilities (breastfeeding etc.)
- reduced functionality (blindness, wheelchair user etc.)
- ethnicity (African, Chinese, Norwegian etc.)
- national origins (country of origin)
- skin colour (brown, black, white etc.)
- language (English, Norwegian, Urdu etc.)
- religion (Christian, Islam, Hindu etc.)
- life stance (Humanism, atheism etc.)
- sexual orientation (lesbian and homosexual)
- gender identity or expression

In work relations it is also illegal to discriminate on the grounds of:

- age (elderly or young)
- political beliefs
- membership in labour organisation (trade union)

Example

If for example you are refused the opportunity to rent a flat because you are a foreigner, this may be discrimination. Discrimination may in this case have incurred because of your national origin or ethnicity.

If you are treated less favorably than others on the basis of one or several of the bases of discrimination, and the differentiated treatment does not have a due and valid reason, you have been discriminated against.

3.3.3 No legal exceptions apply

3rd

Characteristic

The third key characteristic is that no legal exceptions apply. The differential treatment is only legal if it is fair, necessary and not disproportionately intrusive.

Fair differential treatment

Fair differential treatment

For the differential treatment to be fair one has to consider what is reasonable. This is often a difficult legal evaluation. Furthermore one has to see if the differential treatment is based on correct facts.

Example

In a case before the Equality and Anti-Discrimination Ombud (LDO) a woman had applied for a job as a cleaner in a Church.

The woman had just moved to Norway and she spoke very little Norwegian. The Church did not wish to employ her because her Norwegian was poor. The employer believed that this was a valid reason not to employ her.

The woman felt that she had been treated unfairly. She felt that she didn't need to speak Norwegian well in order to clean floors.

The LDO agreed with the woman that her lack of Norwegian skills was not a valid reason not to offer her the job. Therefore it was not a fair differential treatment.

Necessary differential treatment

Necessary differential treatment

For something to be necessary it has to be more than desirable.

The differential treatment is not necessary if the goal can be achieved in another way than someone being treated differently.

Proportional differential treatment

Proportional differential treatment

The differential treatment cannot under any circumstances be disproportionately invasive towards the person being treated differently. Disproportionally invasive means that the act has to be worse for the person being treated differently than the importance of achieving the goal obtained by the differential treatment.

Seek help

It can be hard to find out whether you have been exposed to unfair differential treatment (discrimination). It is therefore advisable to seek help, if you are in doubt about having been discriminated.

3.4 Direct and indirect discrimination

Both direct and indirect differential treatment can be discrimination.

Direct

1. “Direct differential treatment” means an act or omission that has the purpose or effect that a person is treated worse than others in the same situation.

Indirect

2. “Indirect differential treatment” means any apparently neutral provision, condition, practice, act or omission that result in a person being put in a worse position than other people.

What is direct and indirect discrimination?

Example of direct discrimination

One example of direct discrimination is a case before the Equality and Discrimination Ombud (LDO) concerning an advertisement published by an airline. The company wished to employ a woman between the ages of 20-25 and of Norwegian national (ethnic) origins.

LDO ruled that this was direct discrimination because the advertisement excluded many job seekers. The advertisement excluded many job seekers because only ethnic Norwegian women between the ages 20-25 could apply. All those who are sufficiently qualified must be able to apply for an advertised job. This kind of advertisement is direct discrimination and is unlawful.

Example of indirect discrimination

An example of indirect discrimination is a case dealt with by the LDO concerning a public swimming pool where there was a standing order that "usual" bathing suits must be worn. This meant a one-piece suit, swimming shorts/trunks or bikini.

A number of women wanted to use something that covered more due to their religion. This was not allowed and they were therefore not allowed to swim.

The rule applied to all, but nevertheless resulted in these women being disadvantaged because they were unable to use the pool.

The LDO ruled that the consequence of the ban were discriminating for Muslim women. This was indirect discrimination and unlawful.

4.0 HARASSMENT AND RACISM

4.1 What is harassment?

Unwanted and offensive conduct

Harassment is unwanted conduct or behavior a person exhibits towards you that are experienced by you as annoying and an offence to your dignity. In other words it is conduct or behavior that makes you feel victimized.

Harassment is illegal

The Norwegian law forbids harassment on the grounds of gender, pregnancy, parental leave, religion, life stance, skin color, national origins, ethnic background, disability, gender identity, sexual orientation, age or combinations of the terms mentioned above.

Bullying can be harassment. Bullying can be that someone gossips about you (talks behind your back) or makes negative comments. Bullying in the work place is illegal according to Norwegian law.

Example

Many immigrant women who wish to live in accordance with western norms say that they experience harassment from their own ethnic community. One example of this is that some Muslim women get unpleasant comments if they choose not to wear a Hijab. This type of bullying is harassment, and it is illegal.

Illegal everywhere

Harassment can take place in the street, at home, at work, at a public office etc. Regardless of where harassment takes place, it is forbidden by law.

Violence is punishable

If harassment becomes physically violent, the perpetrator can be punished pursuant to Norwegian law. In such a case the incident must be reported to the police.

4.2 Sexual harassment

Sexual harassment

Any form for unwanted sexual attention which purpose or consequence is to be offensive, frightening, hostile, degrading, humiliating or bothersome is considered sexual harassment.

Sexual attention

Sexual attention is attention which has a sexual character. The attention can be anything from looks, touching, comments and suggestions with sexual undertone, to attempted rape or rape.

What is sexual harassment?

To be considered as sexual harassment the sexual attention has to be unwanted. Whether the sexual attention is unwanted depends on the individual perception of the person which the attention is directed at.

As a starting point the person which exercises the sexual harassment has to be made aware that the attention is unwanted for the attention to be considered as sexual harassment. However, if the attention is of a severe character it can be sexual harassment even though the harasser is not made aware that the attention is unwanted.

Furthermore, the attention has to bother the person which the attention is directed at. Whether the attention is bothersome will be decided based on an overall assessment. In this assessment the perception of the person being sexually harassed is very important. Other factors are time and place of the harassment and the relationship between the harasser and the person being harassed. The objective characteristics of the attention will also influence the assessment. One shall also take into account that men and women often have a different perception regarding what is to be considered sexual attention.

Example

Some women experience sexual harassment at work. If your boss for example pinches your bottom or touches you in other inappropriate ways against your will, you are being sexually harassed.

Illegal everywhere

Sexual harassment can take place in the street, at home, at work, at a public office etc. Regardless of where harassment takes place, it is forbidden by law.

Violence is punishable

If the sexual harassment becomes physically violent, the perpetrator can be punished pursuant to Norwegian law. In such a case the incident must be reported to the police.

4.3 What is racism?

Racism

Extremely gross harassment that is based on the colour of your skin or ethnic origins is racism.

Illegal and punishable

Racism is illegal and punishable by Norwegian law. Both written and oral comments are punishable by fines or imprisonment.

Report to the police

If you experience racism you must go to the police and report it. The police can help you file the report.

5.0 SITUATIONS WHERE DISCRIMINATION MAY OCCUR

In this section of the brochure we will present a number of concrete examples of discrimination from various areas of life. We ask questions we believe are relevant for you, and try to provide answers.

5.1 Education

Many girls find that their parents prioritize their brothers' education over their own.

Is it legal to treat children differently with regards to education?

Equal rights to education

The answer is no. Boys and girls and women and men have equal rights to education.

This means that they have the same right to attend school and shall have an equal amount of time for homework. They also have the same right to decide what education or job they wish to take.

Religious schools

Some religious schools teach their pupils that women and men have different worth and different roles.

Is it legal for schools to teach these values?

Human rights

The answer is no. The Equality and Discrimination Ombud (LDO) and The Complaints Board have prohibited schoolbooks that teach that girls and women are subservient and must obey men. This applies in all schools, including religious schools.

Human rights legislation protects girls from being brought up to believe that they are inferior to boys.

Even though women and men are equal under the law, there are many who think that this does not apply within religious communities. Religious communities, including all forms of life stance communities can for example be Churches, Mosques or Temples.

The law draws up the boundaries for the degree to which religious/life stance communities etc. can treat women and men differently.

What is a religious leader or teacher allowed to say and teach?

Religious communities

There is a limit to what a Minister, Pastor, Priest Imam or other religious leaders can say.

A religious leader cannot harass women or encourage violence

A religious leader does not have the right to degrade or harass women (see section 3 for more details about harassment etc.). Nor can a religious leader encourage the use of violence – “discipline” – in the home against “disobedient” women and children.

5.2 Work

5.2.1 Discrimination in the work place

Discrimination in the work place is illegal

Discrimination in the workplace is illegal.

This means that you are protected against discrimination in:

- advertisements for employees
- interviews
- engagement in a new job
- relocation
- promotion
- training
- wages
- leave of absence
- cessation (that you have to leave your work)

Example

A Muslim woman wished to travel on a pilgrimage (hajj). She was working for SFO and was refused three weeks holiday to travel. SFO said that in regard for the best interests of the children at SFO she couldn't be away for that long.

She lodged a complaint with the Equality and Discrimination Ombud (LDO).

The LDO ruled that this was indirect discrimination because the woman was not given an individual assessment with regard to her request. She had therefore been treated less favourably than others because she was religious. SFO had no valid reason to refuse her request for holiday time off.

5.2.2 Pregnancy and work

Discrimination due to pregnancy is illegal

It is illegal to discriminate against women due to pregnancy or childbirth.

The Equality and Discrimination Ombud (LDO) has ruled in many cases concerning pregnancy and work.

Example

A woman worked as a cook at a hotel. The woman was working part time as required. When the hotel decided to employ a new cook in a permanent full time position, the woman said she would like the post. The woman was promised the job. After the promise was made she became pregnant. The hotel then said that they would employ a new cook instead.

The woman approached the LDO for help.

The LDO ruled that this was discrimination because the reason why she didn't get the job was that she was pregnant. This is illegal. Pregnancy is not a valid reason for treating people unfairly. The woman was therefore able to continue in her job.

5.2.3 Job interviews

Illegal to ask

It is not permitted to ask about religion or political about religion, politics or pregnancy

affiliations in a job interview. It is also illegal to ask if the candidate is or is planning to get pregnant.

Have you ever been asked about any of this in a job interview?

Example

A woman was asked about her faith during an interview for a job with the University of Oslo. When the woman replied that she was Muslim, the interviewer asked about her eating habits. The woman lost self-confidence during the interview and afterwards felt that she had been discriminated against.

She sought legal advice and it was said that she had been discriminated against.

5.2.4 Clothing in the workplace

Many wonder whether they have the right to wear a headscarf (hijab) at work.

In the majority of workplaces you have the right to wear religious clothing and symbols while you work. But you also have the right not to wear the hijab.

A right to choose

As a woman living in Norway, you have the right to choose how you wish to dress. You also have the right to be treated on equal terms with others, even if you do dress differently.

The Equality and Discrimination Ombud (LDO) has dealt with a number of cases that concern what rights women have to wear the hijab at work.

What the LDO says in these cases will also apply to other religious clothing.

Example

A Muslim woman worked in a shop in a shopping centre. She wore a hijab at work. Her manager received a number of complaints from other shops at the centre.

He therefore told the woman that if she wanted to keep her job she had to stop wearing the hijab.

The woman found it too humiliating to take off her hijab. She believed that she had been unfairly treated in comparison to others that wore a hijab, and that the dismissal was discriminating.

The woman contacted the LDO. The LDO ruled that this was discrimination and at the woman had the right to wear a hijab in her workplace. The grounds of discrimination were gender and religion.

Exception

To refuse a person to wear religious headwear or symbols one must have a valid reason to do so. In some jobs it is necessary to be perceived as neutral with regards to religion and value. A police officer should therefore not wear religious symbols such as hijabs or crosses.

Exception

Some work tasks require a certain level of safety. In such cases an employer can demand that employees do not wear personal and/or religious symbols. This applies to work where it is necessary to wear helmets or personal protective clothing/equipment.

5.2.5 Working in religious communities etc.

Discrimination in religious communities is illegal

Can religious institutions differentiate between women and men when taking on employees?

The starting point is that no religious community can differentiate between women and men or applicants from other religions when hiring.

Exception

When hiring, religious communities can only differentiate between women and men when the post or position is closely connected with religiously defined tasks that can only be carried out by a member of a defined gender.

Example

This means that a church cannot decide whether a cleaner's job shall be given to either a man or woman, but they can decide that only men can be priests.

5.2.6 Part-time employment

Discrimination of part-time employees is illegal

Many women in Norway work part-time, and wonder if they have the same rights as full-time employees. Part-time means that you work less hours than a standard working week (37,5 hours a week).

Does a woman working part-time have fewer rights than a woman working full-time?

The answer is no. When you work part-time you have the same rights as full-time employees. This means that you for example have the same pension rights as full-time employees, but in accordance with the hours you work. This means that if you for example have a 50 % position, you have 50 % of pension rights.

Indirect discrimination

Discrimination against part-time employees can sometimes also be indirect discrimination on the basis of gender, as most part-time employees are women.

Priority for full-time work

As a part employee you have the right to be prioritized when your employer decides to engage someone in a full-time position. This means that you are first in the queue.

It is illegal to discriminate on the basis of ethnicity or gender in the housing market

5.3 Housing

Many immigrants find that it can be difficult to rent/lease or buy a home. A home can be a house or an apartment etc.

Does a landlord have the right to decline you as a tenant or buyer because you are an immigrant?

Example

It is illegal to discriminate on the grounds of ethnicity or gender in connection with the rental, lease or sale of a house, apartment or similar housing.

One case before the LDO was about an Iranian family that wished to purchase a house. The family made the best offer for the house, but the owners sold it to an ethnic Norwegian family. The owners said that they didn't dare to sell the house to foreigners because they didn't want "any trouble".

According to the LDO, the Iranian family had been refused the house because they were foreigners, and they had been treated unfairly in comparison to ethnic Norwegian families. The family being foreigners and that the owners were afraid of "trouble" was not a valid reason to deny them the right to purchase the house.

This was discrimination.

It may also be discrimination if you cannot rent or lease a home because you are not from Norway or have a foreign-sounding name.

Example

It is illegal to include terms in the Internet pages of www.finn.no in the housing section that the landlord wants Norwegian applicants only.

In a case put before the LDN in 2013 the tribunal ruled that a landlord by rejecting two tenants based on their sexual orientation had not acted in accordance with the law.

5.4 Particularly about discrimination of immigrant women.

5.4.1 Public offices

It is illegal for the public sector to discriminate

Many immigrant women feel that they are discriminated relations with public service offices such as for example

Public employees, civil servants and institutions shall not. This means that they cannot treat you differently than others are from another country, unless they have a valid reason.

5.4.2 Checking in at hotels

Illegal to discriminate at check-ins

Some foreign women have been declined at the check-in counter at hotels due to their foreign appearance, as the receptionist believed that they were prostitutes.

Example

One example from the Equality and Discrimination Ombud (LDO) and Complaints Board was about two Asian women who wished to check in at a hotel in Oslo.

The two women were denied rooms with the excuse that they lived close to Oslo. The hotel had this rule to prevent drug addicts and prostitutes from staying at the hotel. The women felt that it had been presumed that they were prostitutes because they were female and from Asia.

The women, who claimed that they had been discriminated against, complained to the LDO. The LDO and Complaints Board ruled that the incident came under the category cross discrimination. The women had been unjustifiably treated differently and less favourably than others, because they were women and from a different country. The grounds of discrimination were therefore both gender and ethnicity.

5.4.3 Equality between women and men

It is illegal to discriminate within the family

Many immigrant women find that their husbands do not want them to work or go out without an escort. Is this discrimination?

The right to not be discriminated against also applies within the family.

This means that as a woman you have the right to be treated with the same respect and dignity as your husband. You also have the right to decide what you want to do and when you want to do it.

Example

Some women are told by their husbands that they can't go outside the house, use the telephone or Internet, or take work. If this is done against their will it is deemed to be loss of liberty, or, in simple terms, imprisonment.

Illegal Punishable

Depriving a person of their liberty is illegal in Norway and whomever does this can be punished under the law.

5.4.4 Equality for children

It is illegal to discriminate between children in the family

Many girls find that they are given more responsibility for housework than their brothers – is this discrimination?

The answer is yes. Girls and boys have the right to equal treatment within the family. This means that both girls and boys shall attend school and shall be respected equally in the home.

Many immigrant women find that their husbands have their “hearts in their homelands”. This sometimes makes them not want their children to become “too Norwegian” and participate in society in the same way as Norwegian children.

Children have the right to participate in decision making

Children have the right to full integration in Norway. This means that they have the right to participate in society, engage in leisure time activities, go to school and have friends.

When parents are making a decision on behalf of their child, the child has the right to be heard and to participate in making the decision. Girls and boys have the same right to be heard in matters that concern them.

Parents have the right to advise children when they are deciding on things such as hairstyles, clothes etc., but they do not have the right to force a child. This applies equally to religious clothing and symbols.

6.0 WHAT YOU SHOULD DO IF YOU HAVE EXPERIENCED DISCRIMINATION

6.1 Seek help

There are several organizations you can reach out to for help in a situation where you believe you may have been discriminated against. JURK and OMOD are two of them.

6.1.1 JURK

What is Legal Advice for Women (JURK)?

JURK is a politically independent legal aid initiative that is run by law students. We provide advice and guidance on legislation and rules to all who define themselves as women.

JURK is bound by secrecy and you can trust us and feel safe when you contact us. Our counselling is free of charge.

How to contact JURK

You can visit JURK:
Skippergata 23 i Oslo
Mondays 12-15
Wednesday 17-20

You can call JURK:
22 84 29 50
Mondays 9-15
Wednesday 17-20

You can send a letter to JURK:
Skippergata 23, 0154 OSLO

Fax: 22 84 29 51

You can visit www.jurk.no for more information about JURK.

6.1.2 OMOD

OMOD (The Institution Against Public Discrimination) is an organization which works to prevent public discrimination on the basis of ethnicity.

How to contact OMOD

You can call OMOD:
22 20 87 97

You can file a written request to OMOD on their website www.omod.no, where you can also find more information about them.

6.2 File a complaint to the LDN

Complain about discrimination

If you believe you are or have been discriminated against you can complain to the Equality and Anti-Discrimination Tribunal (LDN).

Increased awareness

When you complain about discrimination you are helping to increase awareness and focus on discrimination. This helps to develop a less discriminating society.

Put an end to the discrimination

If the LDN finds that discrimination has been practised, it can ask the perpetrator to stop discriminating. The LDN can also encourage you and the other party to find an amicable solution together.

The Equality and Anti-Discrimination Ombud (LDO) can guide you on how to write the complaint to LDN. LDO can also give you advice and guidance in a case regarding discrimination or harassment.

How to contact the LDO:

LDO's post address is:
Postboks 8048 Dep
N-0031 Oslo
Norge

You can also send an email to: post@LDO.no. Remember that you should not send sensitive information in an e-mail.

You can call the LDO:
Green number: 800 41 556
Telephone: 23 15 73 00
Fax: 23 15 73 01

You can also send an SMS to 95 92 05 44.

For more information about the LDO you can visit their website: www.ldo.no.

How to contact the LDN:

You can send LDN an email on post@diskrimineringsnemnda.no

You can call LDN:

Telephone: 90 93 31 25

You can visit LDN's website

7.0 NORWEGIAN DISCRIMINATION LAW

There are several laws that seek to protect people from discrimination. Here follows a list of those laws.

- Likestillings- og diskrimineringsloven 16. juni 2017 nr. 51
- Menneskerettsloven 21. mai 1999 nr. 30
- Arbeidsmiljøloven av 17. juni 2005 nr. 62
- Straffeloven av 20. mai 2005 nr. 28
- Husleieloven av 26. mars 1999 nr. 17
- Borettslag loven av 6. juni 2003 nr. 39
- Boligbyggelagsloven av 6. juni 2003 nr. 38
- Eierseksjonsloven 23. mai 1997 nr. 31

You can find these laws on www.lovdata.no
